Indignation

TO THE EDITOR:

Our leaders in Washington should admit by now the blunder of our State Department in backing the overthrow of the Nhu government.

They smeared Madame Nhu (granted she was sharp-tongued) who was seeking the truth and about to find it.

They smeared Gen. Walker, labeling him "mental" as per instructions of the late Russian secret-police chief, Beria, because Walker had learned the truth and was spreading it.

They have had a continuous concentration of effort against the Birch Society, because that group is educating America in the ways and wherefores of our government's predicament.

They have ridiculed the DAR, chartered by Congress and sworn to protect our Constitution.

Where is all this leading us? The Cuban situation speaks loudly to those who care enough to listen.

The Viet Nam shame is screaming as loudly as our wounded men on that bare hospital floor halfway around the world.

One by one, the barriers to Communism will fall because years ago it was planned that way by those who would conquer us who are the "babies" of the international diplomacy and intrigue world.

We are idealists and too naive. Our State Department and the CIA, not to mention the Supreme Court in its decisions over the years, are pussyfooting.

Brotherhood is a fine ideal and so is "turning the other cheek" to achieve it, but there is such a thing as righteous indignation, and I certainly have that.
